DENOUNCES STATEMENTS BY VARDAMAN PROXIES

False Charges as to His Church Alignment Shows What Orders He Is a Member of. A Red Hot Declaration. A Democrat To Democrats.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 20.—Hon. Hubert Stephens left tonight to resume his canvass for the second primary. Before leaving Mr. Stephens said in a few words about the campaign and took occasion to nail certain slanderous and false rumors circulated in different places where he is personally well known.

To The Commercial correspondent Mr. Stephens said:

"I have never seen greater enthusiasm and earnestness in any of my campaigns, than my friends in every section of the state are displaying. And this means that we are going to win by a handsome majority on the fifth of September.

"I am deeply grateful to those loyal friends who rendered such valiant service before the first primary when the outlook was not as bright as it is today. Mr. Vardaman's friends were given the positive assurance by his spokesmen that he would be nominated in the first primary, and it is natural that they should be discouraged now with an anti-Vardaman majority of not less than 10,000 against him. He pulled his full strength on the 15th of August and from that day his cause began to wane.

"The opposition's storehouse of falsehoods and misrepresentations was bankrupted in an effort to defeat me, and the whispered propaganda that was spread against me on the eve of the election by the most carefully premeditated plan eclipsed anything I have even seen in Mississippi politics. Letters are pouring into my office from every section of the state telling me of the misrepresentations that were spread by henchmen of my opponent. In the effort to create prejudice against me, misstatements have been made as to my religious and fraternal connections. To answer these, I will state that I am a member of the Methodist church, and have been for more than 30 years, and that the only secret or fraternal orders of which I am a member are the Masons (blue lodge, chapter, council and commandery), the Woodmen of the World, Elks and Knights of Pythias.

"In some places it has been told that during the war I was drafted, that I married a young lady, and her father kept me out of the army, and that when the war was over I divorced her, I am told that this ridiculous falsehood influenced votes against me. Again it was told that I have been married three times, that I divorced two wives, broke up a man's home and married his wife, and that I am now living with her.

"The fact is that I married nearly 23 years ago, which was my first and only marriage, and my wife and I are still living together, as every one in New Albany knows. In labor centers it was assiduously circulated that I had, at some other point in the state bitterly assailed the leaders of organized labor. Such statements were absolutely false. I did call attention to the fact in a vigorous manner as possible, and shall continue to call attention to it that certain well known socialists, Bolsheviks and I. W. W. sympathizers had instigated the white men and women of Mississippi to vote for James K. Vardaman.

"I, myself, heard the prevaricator who heads the list of proxies, or rather Bilbo, state in a speech recently that 'Hubert Stephens made 11 speeches for Lee Russell. He knew that statement was absolutely false, because he was in Russell's headquarters at the time and knew who were making speeches for Russell. Others have grape-vined the charge that until recently I was a Vardaman man. I want to repeat here for the benefit of my friends that if one single responsible person in Mississippi will state that I made a single speech for Lee Russell, if I gave out a single interview in his behalf, or if I solicited a single person to vote for him I will quit this race.

"That proposition has stood since the first day of January, when I discovered that part of the plan of my male opponent was to have henchmen infest the lobbies of local hotels and bottomhole every person but would give them ear and spread that report. "I never cast a vote for James K. Vardaman in my life.

"I have called attention to these things for the purpose of showing the character of the campaign that has been waged against me—a campaign planned and carried out by some of the aides and advisers of James K. Vardaman—and put my friends on guard during the second primary fight. This desperate, dastardly attempt to defeat me in the first primary failed and I have no doubt that the men and women of Mississippi who believe in fair play, decency in politics and cleanliness in holding office will voice their resentment on the fifth of September."

DISTINGUISHED LADY. PLEADS FOR STEPHENS

Miss Etta Mitchell, Democratic National Committeewoman for Mississippi, has issued a statement in which she declares for Hubert D. Stephens, saying "Hold the torch of the Democratic party high by voting for a tried and true Democrat, Hubert D. Stephens, for United States Senator."

The following is the statement of Miss Mitchell:

"Hold the torch of the Democratic party on high by voting for a tried and true Democrat, Hubert D. Stephens for United States Senator.

"My sister women, remember that the glory of old Mississippi lies within the hollow of your hands, and let this fair state once again come into her own; for

"No star is lost we ever once have seen;

We always may be what we might have been.

This responsibility is yours, so be strong.

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;

We have hard work to do and loads to lift;

Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,

How hard the battle goes, the day how long;

Faint not, fight on! Tomorrow comes the song."

ROBINSON-BARWICK.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Robinson of Earle, Ark., was the scene of a pretty wedding Thursday afternoon when their niece, Miss Leta Robinson, became the bride of Mr. H. K. Barwick, Jr., of Wynne, Ark.

An improvised altar banked with ferns and lighted with yellow tapers marked the place of the ceremony, which was preceded by "O Promise Me," sweetly sung by the bride's aunt, Mrs. O. L. Robinson.

The double ring ceremony was said by the Rev. J. N. R. Score, of Wynne, Ark. The nuptial music was well rendered by Mr. P. A. Gowan.

The bride was attired in a becoming French model suit of blue walden cloth, trimmed in squirrel with gray accessories to match and wore a corsage of bride roses and valley lilies. Following the ceremony a reception was held.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Robinson of Wynne, but has made her home with her uncle and aunt in Earle for the past three years, where she has been a social favorite.

Mr. Barwick was formerly of Grenada, Miss., but has been in the automobile business in Wynne for several years, where he is quite prominent in church, business and social circles.

The happy couple left for an extended honeymoon in the north and east, after which they will be at home to their friends in Wynne, Ark.—Commercial Appeal.

Grenada County People Invited To Come Over.

The Sentinel has been advised by the friends of Hon. Hubert D. Stephens of Tallahatchie County that Mr. Stephens will speak at the court house in Charleston next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Grenada County friends are invited to come over and help welcome Mr. Stephens.

GRENADA A HEALTHY TOWN

Report of City Health Officer Shows Only 28 Deaths Within City Limits in a Period of Twelve Months.

The report of Dr. J. W. Young, City Health Officer, which was submitted to the City Council at its last meeting is one in which all Grenadians may take pardonable pride. The report shows that in twelve months' period from July 1st, 1921 to July 1st 1922, there were only twenty-eight deaths within the city limits, fifteen of which were whites and thirteen negroes. Of the whites, twelve were adults, six male and six female, two were children under ten months of age and one was stillborn. Of the negroes, five were males and eight were females. Of all deaths, one was ninety-six years of age, five were over eighty years of age, seven were over seventy, six were more than sixty-three years old and the balance, except the children mentioned above, varied in age from thirty-five to forty-five years.

Figuring on a basis of 4,000 population, this means that Grenada's death rate is seven-tenths of one percent or seven per thousand, a very low rate.

Stephens Club Formed. Address Covering Issues of Campaign.

The Records and the Standing of The Two Candidates Compared. People Urged to Consider That Senator Elected Will Be Expected to Do Team Work. Democrats Asked to Not Forget That Bilbo and Russell Are a Part of The Vardaman Machine and That The Debauchery Under The Administrations of These Two Men Are But Some of The Snakes That Have Come Out of The Vardaman Nest. Question Asked About Where Vardaman Campaign Committee is Getting All Its Money. An Appeal to The Good Judgment and Best Thought of Democrats.

The friends and supporters of Hon. Hubert Stephens in Grenada County celebrated the victory of the loyal Democrats of Mississippi over ex-Senator Vardaman by organizing last Friday night at the court house in Grenada the first Stephens Club since the first primary. The creed adopted reads: "We the undersigned qualified electors and loyal Democrats of Grenada County, Mississippi, believing in the honesty, sincerity and ability of Hon. Hubert Stephens, and that his election at this time would redound to the general welfare of the entire citizenship of the state and prove helpful to the country at large, hereby enroll ourselves as members of the Grenada County Stephens Club and pledge ourselves to use all honorable means at our command to secure Mr. Stephens' nomination at the second primary to be held September 5th.

The enrollment at organization runs over 200. But short notice was given of the meeting. Much enthusiasm prevailed and it is believed that the club will soon enroll practically 1,000 voters, or 80 per cent of the voting strength of the county.

Dr. J. W. Young, a confederate soldier and a man whom everybody in Grenada County holds in the highest esteem, was made president of the club. Dr. Young stated in accepting the presidency that he felt complimented; that he was at one time a supporter of Mr. Vardaman, but that when Vardaman left the Democratic party he could not go with him. He stated that he had long believed that if the ladies were given the ballot that they would secure a higher standard of public officers and having had that view, he supported Miss Belle Kearney in the first primary, but now, the doctor said, he saw his duty was to support Mr. Stephens. He said that he did not believe that the women of Mississippi would ever support their ballots that they wanted a man in the United States Senate who even remotely aided Germany when our American boys were on the battle lines fighting for American homes, and to maintain those rights that George Washington and the revolutionary patriots secured for America.

Committees were named to look after every detail of the campaign. A number of ladies were present and steps were taken to get every lady voter in Grenada County into the Stephens Club. It is believed that at least 98 per cent of the women voters in the county will vote for Stephens. Plans were made to have some prominent speaker visit the county and address the voters in the interest of the cause which Hubert Stephens represents.

The next meeting of the Stephens Club will be tonight (Friday) at 7:30. To Fellow Democrats of Grenada County:

The purpose of this address is not to antagonize the views or wishes of any of our County neighbors or friends, but to say publicly what is in our hearts and minds touching the issues involved in the second primary election to be held throughout Mississippi, September 5.

Members of Big Family.

We are all members of a big family—the State of Mississippi. We live, as it were, in one of the 82 rooms of this big family. Therefore, being brothers and sisters, it is meet and proper that we should take counsel of each other; that we should reason together about matters that concern the welfare of each and all of us.

As members of this big family, we should be called upon to express ourselves at the coming primary as between two men for the great office of United States Senator.

Personally, we are sure that it makes little difference to most of us which one of these two men is chosen. If neither of them should be elected, we suspect that most of us would move along in about the same way. We would each continue to have our individual affairs to look after; our families to care for, our own debts to pay. Most of us have learned that electing any man or any set of men to office is no panacea for our individual problems.

Nevertheless we cannot live to ourselves if we would, and we would not if we could.

We owe a duty to each other and to the day and generation in which we live that must be discharged by the exercise of the right to vote.

For the office of United States Senator, we are narrowed down to a choice between two men.

The question, we respectfully suggest, should not be considered on the plane of the interests of either of them. Their personal welfare, their hopes should cut no figure except insofar as they show the fitness or lack of fitness for the office.

State Owes The Two Candidates Nothing.

The people at large owe these two men nothing more than it owes us or anybody else. Just a square deal; that's all. They offer themselves for our consideration. They expect the people to "look them over," to pass judgment upon their fitness and whatever qualifications, if any, they may have.

It is patent that any man chosen for a United States Senatorship, is expected to do team work. Yea, the very mandate of the law is to consult with and labor with the other Senator from the State.

Hire Man to Work With Another.

If you had an important law case and had one lawyer employed, would you be exercising ordinary prudence and good judgment, if, when you found that another lawyer was necessary, you employed one that had abused and vilified the lawyer already in the case?

If you had a good horse that worked well in double harness, would you select another horse to work with him that was known for kicking out of the traces, for balking and for running away with the wagon?

Vardaman's Abuse of Harrison.

Ex-Senator Vardaman has been bitter and vituperative in many things which he has said about Senator Pat Harrison. He calls Harrison a "two-legged fice scratching for his fleas." He has spoken of him as a "pin-head" and as one "whose brain is a piece of sterile mentality"—these are just a few of the compliments he has paid one of your Senators, a man who stands today at the forefront among the Democrats of the Senate, and who is regarded as one of the leaders of the Democratic party in the Nation.

After having said all this about Harrison, could Vardaman, in the work of his election, approach Pat Harrison as one of his own men?

Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of the State Democratic Executive Committee, that, notwithstanding the regulations adopted at its meeting July 1st, as to who should be allowed to vote, it develops that a large number of Socialists and Republicans as well as many others otherwise disqualified voted in a number of counties in the Democratic Primary August 15th, in defiance of law and the regulations of this committee; and

Whereas, the result of a primary determined by the votes of those without any moral or legal right to participate in the said primary would be highly prejudicial to the interests of the Democratic party and repulsive to the will of those honored party heroes who have borne the burdens of Democracy since the days when the carpetbaggers came to Mississippi to plunder our people; and

Whereas, we cannot believe that the duly qualified Democrats at any precinct or in any County, when they think seriously, will run the risk of allowing those not qualified, to vote.

Therefore be it resolved, 1. That we reaffirm and emphasize the regulations adopted July the first and we urge the county authorities to see that copies of those as well as these resolutions be sent out with each ballot box on the day of the second primary.

No. 2. That the various County Democratic Executive Committees are hereby authorized and urged to adopt such other regulations as they may deem necessary to prevent illegal voting in their respective counties, and that they see that the same are strictly observed.

The above is a true and exact copy of additional regulations as to the Second Primary election to be held September 5th, 1922, adopted by the Democratic State Executive Committee at a meeting held in Jackson.

The following additional resolution was offered by Captain W. T. Pate: Resolved that resolutions of the State Democratic Executive Committee passed at its last meeting prior to the Primary Election of August the 15th which provided that only those who voted for the nominee of the Democratic party or would have done so, had they voted at the last Presidential election be and the same are hereby readopted in regard to who are eligible to vote in the primary election, and

Be it further resolved, That the Secretary of this committee be authorized and instructed to send a copy of these resolutions and such other resolutions as may be adopted to the Chairmen of the several County Executive Committees, and

Be it further resolved, That the definite explanations and instructions be sent to each Chairman for carrying out to the letter the purpose of said resolutions.

Miss Belle Kearney was called upon and made a ringing Democratic speech, declaring herself for Hubert Stephens in the second primary.

On motion, the Committee adjourned to meet September 12, at 10 o'clock, A. M. to canvass the return of the Second Primary election to be held September 5th.

MISS KEARNEY MAKES RINGING PLEA FOR STEPHENS

Thinks Stephens' Election Would Free State From "Organized Power of Unprincipled Politicians." Will Do Anything in Her Power To Aid Him.

Miss Belle Kearney held proxy of Hon. Rowe Hays of Sumner at the meeting of State Democratic Executive Committee held in Jackson, Tuesday.

While awaiting the return of the committee sent to the office of Secretary of State to tabulate the returns, Miss Kearney was called upon for a speech and responded in the following clear cut and pronounced speech in which she most convincingly and persuasively urges the nomination of Hubert Stephens for United States Senator:

"I feel quite at home here. My dear father was a devoted Democrat. I have often wondered which he loved best: the Democratic party, his church, or Masonry. All of the men members of my family have been Democrats through the generations, ever since the birth of the Democratic party.

"I entered the race for the United States Senate with the distinct purpose of helping to free Mississippi of the curse of corrupt politics. Now that I have been eliminated at the first primary the next step, under God, for me to take was to declare myself in favor of the candidacy of Mr. Hubert D. Stephens.

"It is unthinkable that Mississippi should continue under the overshadowing shame of a certain organized power composed of unprincipled politicians. With the election of Mr. Hubert D. Stephens to the United States Senate processes will be set in motion that will lead to Mississippi's redemption; that will place this great state in the position that it once occupied; a position of leadership and of glory. I am willing to do anything in my power to secure the nomination and election of Mr. Hubert D. Stephens."

Following this speech applause continued for several minutes, and at adjournment of the committee, Miss Kearney was warmly greeted by practically all those assembled in the gallery and on the floor of the senate.

NEW STORE TO OPEN SOON.

Mr. Louie Friedman, who has leased the building formerly occupied by H. K. Barwick, is in Grenada and has carpenters busily engaged in remodeling the interior of the building preparatory to opening his dry goods store. Just as soon as all work is completed, Mr. Friedman expects his shipments of goods to commence arriving and he hopes to be able to announce the opening date within a very short time. Mr. Friedman comes to Grenada from Oxford where he has met with unusual success in his line of business and brings with him the best kind of recommendations.

GRENADA BUSINESS COLLEGE OPENS

The Grenada Business College opened its session in Grenada Monday evening at 8 o'clock on the second floor of the Eatman Building. The enrollment on opening night was considerably larger than expected and the students seemed to take a great interest in their work from the very start. The college here is under the management of Mr. W. O. Downing and he is being assisted by able and efficient instructors. Both day and night classes are being conducted. Courses are being offered in all the various line of business work. With Grenada and the surrounding territory to draw its patronage from, the Grenada Business College should meet with great success.

BARWICK MOVES STORE.

In The Sentinel this week, H. K. Barwick is announcing to the public that he has moved his stock of groceries from the corner of Main and Depot Streets to the Cash Grocery and states that he is taking over the stock of the Cash Grocery and will conduct the business along the same lines that have governed his store on the corner. Mr. Barwick has always carried only the best in groceries and food products and his customers know full well that he can be relied upon to do what he says in any matter. This together with his service to his trade accounts in part for the generous share of the patronage accorded him in his business.

"Slim's been croaked," he blurted. "What!" Durand's eyes dilated. "At Maddock's?" "Who did it?" "De guy he was to gun." "Lindsay?" "Dat's de fellow." "Did the bulls get Lindsay?" "Pinched him right on de spot." "Gun 'Slim,' did he?" "Nope. Knocked him cold wit' a chair. Cracked his skull." "Is he dead?" "He'll never be deader. Dave grabbed this sucker Lindsay and yelled that he done it. The bulls pinched him like I said right there." "Did it happen in the dark?" "Sure as you're a foot high. My job was dousin' the glims, and I done it right." "What about 'Slim'? Was he shootin' when he got it?" "The other man shook his head. "This Lindsay man claims he was. I talked wit' a bull afterward. Dey didn't find no gun on 'Slim.' The bull says there was no gun-play." "What became of 'Slim's' gun?" "Search me."

Durand slammed a big flat exultantly down on the desk. "Better than the way I planned it. If the gun's gone, I'll frame Lindsay for the chair. It's Salt creek for his."

He lost no time in getting into touch with Gorilla Dave, who was under arrest at the station house. From him he learned the story of the killing of Collins. One whispered detail of it filled him with malicious glee.

"The boob! He'll go to the death chair sure if I can frame him. We're lucky Bromfield ran back into the little room. Up in front a dozen guys might have seen the whole play even in the dark."

Durand spent the night strengthening the web he had spun to destroy his enemy. He passed to and fro among those who had been arrested in the raid and he arranged the testimony of some of them to suit his case. More than one of the men caught in the dragnet of the police was willing to see the affray from the proper angle in exchange for protection from prosecution.

After breakfast Durand went to the Tombs, where Clay had been transferred at daybreak.

"You needn't bring the fellow here," he told the warden. "I'll go right to his cage and see him. I wantta have a talk with him."

Between two guards Clay climbed the iron steps to an upper tier of cages at the Tombs. He was put into a cell which held two beds, one above the other, as in the cabin of an ocean liner. By the side of the bunks was a narrow space just long enough for a man to take two steps in the same direction.

An unshaven head was lifted in the lower bunk to see why the sleep of its owner was being disturbed.

"I've brought you a cell mate, Shiny," explained one of the guards. "You want to be civil to him. He's just croaked a friend of yours."

"For de love o' Gawd. Who did he croak?"

"'Slim' Jim Collins. Cracked him one on the bean and that was a plenty. Hope you'll enjoy each other's society, gents." The guard closed the door and departed.

"Is that right? Did youse do up 'Slim,' or was he kiddin' me?"

"I don't reckon we'll discuss that subject," said Clay blandly, but with a note of finality in his voice.

"No offense, boss. It's an honor to have so distinguished a gent for a cell pal. For that matter I ain't no cheap rat myself. Dey pinched me for shovin' de queer. I'd ought to get fifteen years," he said proudly.

This drew a grin from Lindsay, though not exactly a merry one. "If you're anxious for a long term you can have some of mine," he told the counterfeiter.

"Maybe you'll go up Salt creek," said Shiny hopefully.

Afraid the allusion might not be understood, he thoughtfully explained that this was the underworld term for the electric chair.

Clay made no further comment. He found the theme a gruesome one.

"Anyhow, I'm glad dey didn't put no holster nor damper-getter wit' me. I'm partickler who I meet. De whole profess is gettin' run down at de heel. I'm dead sick of rats who can't do nothin' but lift pokes," concluded the occupant of the lower berth with disgust.

Though Clay's nerves were of the best he did very little sleeping that night. He was in a grave situation. Even if he had a fair field his plight would be serious enough. But he guessed that during the long hours of darkness Durand was busy weaving a net of false evidence from which he could scarcely disentangle himself. Unless Bromfield came forward at once as a witness for him, his case would be hopeless—and Clay suspected that the clubman would prove only a broken reed as a support. The fellow was selfish to the core. He had not, in the telling western phrase, the guts to go through. He would take the line of least resistance.

Beatrice was in his thoughts a great deal. What would she think of him when the news came that he was a murderer, caught by the police in a den of vice where he had no business to be? Some deep instinct of his soul told him that she would brush through the evidence to the essential truth. She had failed him once. She would never do it again. He felt sure of that.

The gray morning broke, and brought with it the steaming smell of prison cooking, the sounds of the caged underworld, the sense of life all around him dwarfed and warped to twisted moral purposes. A warden came with breakfast—a lukewarm, muddy liquid he called coffee and a stew in which potatoes and bits of fat beef bobbed like life buoys—and Clay ate heartily while his cellmate favored him, between gulps, with a monologue on ethics, politics, and the state of society, as these related especially to Shiny the Shover. Lindsay was given to understand that the whole world was "on de spud," but the big crooks had fixed the laws so that they could wear diamonds instead of stripes.

Presently a guard climbed the iron stairway with a visitor and led the way along the deck outside the tier of cells where Clay had been put.

"He's in seventy-four, Mr. Durand," the man said as he approached. "I'll have to beat it. Come back to the office when you're ready."

The ex-pugilist had come to gloat over him. Clay knew it at once. His pupils narrowed.

He was lying on the bed, his supple body stretched at graceful ease. Not by the lift of an eyelid did he recognize the presence of his enemy.

Durand stood in front of the cell, hands in pockets, the inevitable unlit black cigar in his mouth. On his face was a sneer of malevolent derision.

Shiny the Shover bustled forward, all complaisance. "Pleased to meet youse, Mr. Durand."

The gang politician's insolent eyes went up and down him. "I didn't come to see you."

"'S allright. Glad to see youse, anyhow," the counterfeiter passed went on obsequiously. "Some day, when you've got time I'd like to talk wit' youse about gettin' some fall money."

"Nothin' doin', Shiny. I'm not backin' you," said Jerry coldly. "You've got to go up the river."

"Youse promised—"

"Aw, what the h—l's eatin' you?"

Shiny's low voice carried a plaintive whine. "If you'd speak to de judge—"

"Forget it," Durand brushed the plea away with a motion of the hand.

The Gang Politician's Insolent Eyes Went Up and Down Him. "I Didn't Come to See You."

"It's your cell pal I've come to take a look at—the one who's goin' to the chair."

With one lithe movement Clay swung down to the floor. He sauntered forward to the grating, his level gaze on the ward boss.

"Shiny, this fellow's rotten," he said evenly and impersonally. "He's not only a crook, but he's a crooked crook. He'd throw down his own brother if it paid him."

Durand's cruel lips laughed. "Your pal's a little worried this mornin', Shiny. He ain't slept much. You see the bulls got him right. It's the death chair for him and no lifeboat in sight."

Clay leaned against the bars negligently. He spoke with a touch of lazy scorn. "See those scafs on his face, Shiny—the one on the cheek bone and the other above the eye. Ask him where he got 'em and how?"

Jerry cursed. He broke into a storm of threats, anger sweeping over him in furious gusts. He had come to make sport of his victim and Lindsay somehow took the upper hand at once. He had this fellow where he wanted him at last. Yet the man's soft voice still carried the note of easy contempt. If the Arizona man was afraid, he gave no least sign of it.

"You'll sing another tune before I'm through with you," the prize-fighter prophesied savagely.

The westerner turned away and swung back to his upper berth. He knew, what he had before suspected, that Durand was going to "frame" him if he could. That information gained, the man no longer interested him.

Sullenly Jerry left. There was no profit in jeering at Lindsay. He was too entirely master of every situation that confronted him.

Within the hour Clay was awakened from sleep by another guard with word that he was wanted at the office of the warden. He found waiting him there Beatrice and her father. The girl bloomed in that dingy room like a cactus in the desert.

She came toward him with hands extended, in her eyes gifts of friendship and faith.

"Oh, Clay!" she cried.

"Much obliged, little pardner." Her voice went to his heart like water to the thirsty roots of prickly pears. A warm glow beat through his veins. The doubts that had weighed on him during the night were gone. Beatrice believed in him. All was well with the world.

He shook hands with Whitford.

"Blamed good of you to come, sir." "Why wouldn't we come?" demanded the mining man bluntly. "We're here to do what we can for you."

Little wells of tears brimmed over Beatrice's lids. "I've been so worried." "Don't you. It'll be all right." Strangely enough he felt now that it would. Her coming had brought rippling sunshine into a drab world.

"I won't now. I'm going to get evidence for you. Tell us all about it."

"Why, there isn't much to tell that you haven't read in the papers probably. He came a-shootin' in and was hit by a chair."

"Was it you that hit him?"

"Wouldn't I be justified?" he asked gently.

"But did you?"

For a moment he hesitated, then made up his mind swiftly. "Yes," he told her gravely.

She winced. "You couldn't help it. How did you come to be there?"

"I just dropped in."

"Alone?"

"Yes."

He had burned the bridges behind him and was lying glibly. Why bring Bromfield into it? She was going to marry him in a few days. If her fiancé was man enough to come forward and tell the truth he would do so anyhow.

It was up to him. Clay was not going to betray him to Beatrice.

"The paper says there was some one with you."

"Sho! Reporters sure enough have lively imaginations."

"Johnnie told me you had an engagement with Mr. Bromfield."

"Did you ever know Johnnie get anything right?"

"And Clarendon says he was with you at Maddock's."

Clay had not been prepared for this cumulative evidence. He gave a low laugh of relief. "I'm an awful poor liar. So Bromfield says he was with me, does he?"

"Yes."

He intended to wait for a lead before showing his hand. "Then you know all about it?" he asked carelessly.

Their eyes were on each other, keen and watchful. She knew he was concealing something of importance. He had meant not to tell her that Bromfield had been with him. Why? To protect the man to whom she was engaged. She jumped to the conclusion that he was still shielding him.

"Yes, you're a poor liar, Clay," she agreed. "You stayed to keep back Collins so as to give Clarendon a chance to escape."

"Did I?"

"Can you deny it? Clarendon heard the shots as he was running downstairs."

"He told you that, did he?"

"Yes."

"That ought to help a lot. If I can prove Collins was shootin' at me I can plead self-defense."

"That's what it was, of course."

"Yes. But Durand doesn't mean to let it go at that. He was here to see me this mornin'." Clay turned to the mining man, his voice low but incisive. His brain was working clear and fast.

"Mr. Whitford, I have a hunch he's going to destroy the evidence that's in my favor. There must be two bullet holes in the partition of the rear room where Collins was killed. See if you can't find those bullet holes and the bullets in the wall behind."

"I'll do that, Lindsay."

"And hire me a good lawyer. Send him to me. I won't use a smart one whose business is to help crooks escape. If he doesn't believe in me, I don't want him. I'll have him get the names of all those pulled in the raid and visit them to see if he can't find some one who heard the shots or saw shooting. Then there's the gun. Some one's got that gun. It's up to us to learn who."

"That's right."

"Tim Muldoon will do anything he can for me. There's a girl lives with his mother. Her name's Annie Millikan. She has ways of finding out things. Better talk it over with her to-morrow. We've got to get busy in a hurry."

"Yes," agreed Whitford. "We'll do that, boy."

"Oh, Clay, I'm sure it's going to be all right!" cried Beatrice, in a glow of enthusiasm. "We'll give all our time. We'll get evidence to show the truth. And we'll let you know every day what we are doing."

"How about my going bail for you?" asked her father.

Clay shook his head. "No chance just yet. Let's make our showing at the coroner's inquest. I'll do fine and dandy here till then."

He shook hands with them both and was taken back to his cell. But hope was in his heart now. He knew his friends would do their best to get the evidence to free him. It would be a battle royal between the truth and a lie.

CHAPTER XVIII

Bromfield Makes an Offer.

A youth with a face like a fox added up to Durand in the hotel lobby and whispered in his ear. Jerry and and currying, and the man slipped away as furtively as he had come.

Presently the ex-prize-fighter got up, sauntered to the street and hailed a taxi. Twenty minutes later he paid the driver, turned a corner and passed into an apartment house for bachelors. He took the elevator to the third floor and rang an electric bell at a door which carried the name "Mr. Clarendon Bromfield."

"You Rotten Traitor! Get Out of My Room or I'll Call the Police!"

From the man who came to the door Mr. Bromfield's visitor learned that he was not well and could receive no callers.

"Just mention the Omnium club, and say I'm here on very important business," said Jerry with a sour grin. The reference served as a password.

Jerry was admitted to meet a host quite unable to control his alarm. At sight of his visitor Bromfield jumped up angrily. As soon as his man had gone he broke out in a subdued scream.

"You rotten traitor! Get out of my room, or I'll call the police."

Durand found a comfortable chair, drew a case from his pocket and selected a cigar. He grinned with evil mirth.

"You will, eh? Like h—I you will. You're hidin' from the cops this blessed minute. I've just found out myself where you live."

"You took my money and threw me down. You hired a gunman to kill me."

"Now, what would I do that for? I hadn't a thing in the world against you, an' I haven't now."

"That d—d ruffian shot at me. He was still shooting when I struck him with the chair," cried Bromfield, his voice shaking.

"He didn't know it was you—mistook you for Lindsay in the darkness."

"My G—d, I didn't mean to kill him. I had to do something."

"You did it all right."

"I told you there wasn't to be any violence. It was explicitly stated. You promised. And all the time you were planning murder. I'll tell all I know. By G—d, I will."

"Go easy, Mr. Bromfield," snarled Jerry. "If you do, where do ye think you'll get off at?"

"I'll go to the police and tell them your hired gunman was shooting at us."

"Will you now? An' I'll have plenty of good witnesses to swear he wasn't." Durand bared his teeth in a threat.

"That's not all, either. I'll tie you up with the rube from the West and send you up to Sing Sing as accessory. How'd you like that?"

"If I tell the truth—"

"You'll be convicted of murder in place of him and he'll go up as accessory. I don't care two straws how it is. But you'd be a d—d fool. I'll say that for you."

"I'm not going to let an innocent man suffer in my place. It wouldn't be playing the game."

Durand leaned forward and tapped the table with his finger-tips. His voice rasped like a file. "You can't save him. He's goin' to get it right. But you can hurt yourself a h—l of a lot. Get out of the country and stay out till it's all over with. That's the best thing you can do. Go to the Hawaiian Islands, man. That's a good healthy climate an' the hotel cooking's a lot better than it is at Sing Sing."

"I can't do it," moaned the clubman. "My G—d, man, if it ever came out—that I'd paid money to—to ruin his reputation, and that I'd run away when I could have saved an innocent man—I'd be done for. I'd be kicked out of every club I'm in."

"It won't ever come out if you're not here. But if you force my hand—well, that's different." Again Jerry's grin slit his colorless face. He had this poor devil where he wanted him, and he was enjoying himself.

"What do you want me to do, then?" cried Bromfield, tiny beads of perspiration on his forehead.

"You'll do as I say—beat it outa the country till the things're over with."

"But Lindsay will talk."

"The boob's padlocked his mouth. For some fool reason he's protectin' you. Get out, an' you're safe."

Bromfield sweated blood as he walked up and down the room looking for a way out of his dilemma. He had come to the parting of the road again. If he did this thing he would be a yellow cur. It was one thing to destroy Lindsay's influence with Beatrice by giving her a false impression. From his point of view their friendship was pernicious anyhow and ought to be wiped out. At most the cattlemaster would have gone back unhurt to the about. Nobody there would care about what had happened to him in New York. But to leave him, an innocent man, to go to his death because he was too chivalrous to betray his partner in an adventure—this was something that even Bromfield's atrophied conscience revolted at. Clay was standing by him, according to Durand's story. The news of it lifted a weight from his soul. But it left him, too, under a stronger moral obligation to step out and face the music.

The clubman made the only decision he could, and that was to procrastinate, to put off making any choice for the present.

"I'll think it over. Give me a day to make up my mind," he begged.

Jerry shrugged his heavy shoulders. He knew that every hour counted in his favor, would make it more difficult for the tortured man to come forward and tell the truth. "Sure. Look it over upside and down. Don't hurry. But, man, what's there to think about? I thought you hated this guy—wanted to get rid of him."

"Not that way. G—d, no! Durand, I'll give you any sum in reason to let him go without bringing me into it. You can arrange it."

Jerry slammed down a fist heavily on the table. "I can, but I won't. Not if you was to go fifty-fifty with me to your last cent. I'm goin' to get this fellow. See? I'm goin' to get him good. He'll be crawlin' on his hands and knees to me before I'm through with him."

"What good will that do you? I'm offering you cold cash just to let the truth get out—that Collins was trying to kill him when he got hit."

"Nothin' doin'. I've been layin' for this boob. I've got him now. I'm goin' to turn the screws on and listen to him holler."

Bromfield's valet stepped into the room. "Mr. and Miss Whitford to see you, sir."

Annie Millikan nodded her wise little head. "Jerry's gonna frame him if he can. He's laid the wires for it. That's a lead pipe."

"Sure," agreed Muldoon. "I'll bet he's been busy all night fixin' up his story. Some poor divvies he'll bullyrag into swearin' lies an' others he'll buy. Trust Jerry for the crooked stuff."

"We've got to tell the truth," said Beatrice crisply, pulling on her gloves. "And we'll do it, too. A pack of lies can't stand against four of us all looking for the truth."

Muldoon, who was on night duty this month and therefore had his days free, guided Whitford and his daughter to Maddock's. As they reached the house an express wagon was being driven away. Automatically the license number registered itself in Tim's memory.

The policeman took a key from his pocket and unlocked the door. The three went up the stairs to the deserted gambling hall and through it to the rear room.

"From what Lindsay says, the bullet holes ought to be about as high as his armpits," said Whitford.

"'Slim' must 'a' been standin' about here," guessed Muldoon, illustrating his theory by taking the position he meant. "The bullets would hit the partition close to the center, wouldn't they?"

Beatrice had gone straight to the plank wall. "They're not here," she told them.

"Must be. According to Lindsay's story the fellow was aiming straight at it."

"Well, they're not here. See for yourself."

She was right. There was no evidence whatever that any bullets had passed through the partition. They covered every inch of the cross wall in their search.

"Lindsay must have been mistaken," decided Whitford, hiding his keen disappointment. "This man Collins couldn't have been firing in this direction. Of course everything was confusion. No doubt they shifted round in the dark and—"

He stopped, struck by an odd expression on the face of his daughter. She had stooped and picked up a small fragment of shaving from the floor. Her eyes went from it to a plank in the partition and then back to the thin crisp of wood.

"What is it, honey?" asked Whitford.

The girl turned to Muldoon, alert in every quivering muscle. "That express wagon—the one leaving the house as we drove up—did you notice it?"

"Number 714," answered Tim, promptly.

"Can you have it stopped and the man arrested? Don't you see? They've rebuilt this partition. They were taking away in that wagon the planks with the bullet holes."

Muldoon was out of the room and going down the stairs before she had finished speaking. It was a quarter of an hour later when he returned. Beatrice and her father were not to be seen.

From back of the partition came an eager, vibrant voice. "Is that you, Mr. Muldoon? Come here quick. We've found one of the bullets in the wall."

The policeman passed out of the door through which Bromfield had made his escape and found another small door opening from the passage. It took him into the cubby-hole of a room in which were the wires and instruments used to receive news of the races.

"What about the express wagon?" asked Whitford.

"We'll get it. Word is out for those on duty to keep an eye open for it. Where's the bullet?"

Beatrice pointed it out to him. There it was, safely embedded in the plaster, about five feet from the ground. "Durand wasn't thorough enough. He quit too soon," said the officer, with a grin. "Crooks most always do slip somewhere and leave evidence behind them. Yuh'd think Jerry would have remembered the bullet as well as the bullet hole."

They found the mark of the second bullet, too. It had struck a telephone receiver and taken a chip out of it.

They measured with a tape-line the distance from the floor and the side walls to the place where each bullet struck. Tim dug out the bullet they had found.

They were back in the front room again when a huge figure appeared in the doorway and stood there blocking it.

"Whatta youse doin' here?" demanded a husky voice.

Muldoon nodded a greeting. "Lo, Dave. Just lookin' around to see the scene of the scrap. How about yuh?"

"Beat it," ordered Gorilla Dave, his head thrust forward in a threat. "Youse got no business here."

"Friends av mine." The officer indicated the young woman and her father. "They wanted to see where 'Slim' was knocked out. So I showed 'em. No harm done."

Dave moved to one side. "Beat it," he ordered again.

In the pocket of Muldoon was a request of the district attorney for admission to the house for the party, with an O. K. by the captain of police in the precinct, but Tim did not show it. He preferred to let Dave think that he had been breaking the rules of the force for the sake of a little private graft. There was no reason whatever for warning Durand that they were aware of the clever trick he had pulled off in regard to the partition.

CHAPTER XIX.

Two and Two Make Four.

From Maddock's the Whitfords drove straight to the apartment house of Clarendon Bromfield. For the third time that morning the clubman's valet found himself overborne by the insistence of visitors.

"We're coming in, you know," the owner of the Bird Cage told him in answer to his explanation of why his master could not be seen. "This is important business and we've got to see Bromfield."

"Yes, sir, but he said—"

"He'll change his mind when he knows why we're here." Whitford pushed in and Beatrice followed him. From the adjoining room came the sound of voices.

"I thought you told us Mr. Bromfield had gone to sleep and the doctor said he wasn't to be awakened," said Beatrice with a broad, boyish smile at the man's discomfort.

"The person inside wouldn't take no, miss, for an answer."

"He was like us, wasn't he? Did he give his name?" asked the young woman.

"No, miss. Just said he was from the Omnium club."

Whitford and his daughter exchanged glances. "Same business we're on. Announce us and we'll go right in."

They were on his heels when he gave their names.

Bromfield started up, too late to prevent their entrance. He stood silent for a moment, uncertain what to do, disregarding his fiancée's glance of hostile inquiry lifted toward the other guest.

I had a considerable amount of pain and soreness across my hips and through the small of my back. My kidneys acted so freely I had to get up a couple times at night. ## GOVERNMENT WILL FURNISH HEADSTONES FOR SOLDIER GRAVES

The local post of the American Legion has secured application blanks for headstones furnished by the United States Government for the graves of soldiers, sailors and marines who served in the Army or Navy of the United States during any war or insurrection (including the Revolution). The headstones for Civil and Spanish-American War veterans are of American white marble, 39 inches long, 12 inches wide, and 4 inches thick. The top is slightly rounded, with the inscription cut within a sunken shield. The headstones for World War veterans are of American white marble, 42 inches long, 4 inches thick, 13 inches wide throughout. Each stone is to have a circle 2 1/4 inches in diameter on the front face, near the top. An emblem of religious faith will be cut in each of these circles. These emblems will be either a Latin Cross, or the Star of David (six pointed star). The Star of David will be shown in the circle for soldiers of the Hebrew faith. The inscription to consist of the full name of the soldier with the state from which he came, his rank, regiment and division, also date of death to be cut on the face of the stone.

Mr. Wm. C. McLean, Jr., Post Commander of Jim Trimble Post, No. 35, has application blanks and will gladly assist anyone in securing these headstones. These headstones are furnished and delivered at Government expense, freight prepaid, it being understood that they are to be promptly removed from the depot and set up at private expense.

COTTON WORM POISON SUPPLIES LOCATED

Plant Board Will Furnish Information To Planters and Dealers.

A. & M. College, Miss.—The State Plant Board has just received from the Bureau of Entomology a list of apparently all the available supplies of arsenical poisons in the country suitable for controlling the cotton worm. On account of the heavy demand for these poisons there is a serious shortage in many sections, several planters in Mississippi having been forced to stop dusting through inability to secure poison. Chemical manufacturers are realizing the urgency of the situation and are moving their stocks southward as rapidly as possible.

Planters, dealers, county agents, or others who are having difficulty in securing poison for the cotton worm should write at once to R. B. Coad, Delta Laboratory, Tallulah, La., or to the State Plant Board, A. & M. College, Miss., for the latest list of available poison supplies. This list will be revised from day to day and gladly furnished to all applicants.

PUBLIC SWIMMING POOL DISCUSSED

(By Dr. William Brady in N. O. Daily States)

A swimming pool is just a common bath tub large enough for public use. The common or household bath tub is a holdover from the white enamel era of hygiene, a shower bath is the only really hygienic body washing equipment.

Among the diseases which may be communicated through the public swimming pool are eye inflammations, coryza and other respiratory infections, and possibly some skin diseases.

It is questionable whether venereal diseases are ever communicated or contracted through the use of a public swimming pool.

More important than either frequent change of water in the pool or attempts to disinfect the water, as a sanitary precaution, is strict enforcement of the rule requiring each person to take a shower bath immediately before entering the pool and to submit to medical examination at least once before being permitted to use the pool.

Aside from frequent change or constant flow of water in the pool, various methods of disinfection have been tried, the most efficient being ozonization, which is automatic, inexpensive and does not make the water irritating to the eyes and nose as does chlorination. An examination of the water in the pool is not clear indication of the cloudiness or dirt is of harmless character.

Chlorination is as effective for the water of a swimming pool as it is for the drinking water of a city. The objection to this method of disinfection is that the chlorine compounds used will cause irritation of eyes and nose and a disagreeable odor if present in excess, and on the other hand in trying to avoid these disagreeable conditions insufficient chlorine is likely to be used and the disinfection is inadequate.

Open air pools are much safer to and then even a large lake or sea bathing place, used by all sorts of people indiscriminately, become polluted, and health authorities are compelled to prohibit bathing in the polluted water for a time.

In many small indoor pools the most unhygienic condition prevails, namely, a close, ill ventilated atmosphere. This is especially objectionable, if not dangerous, when many spectators crowd into a small building to watch swimming contests. The ventilation of the room of building housing a swimming pool should be as thorough as that of a gymnasium. In the winter, particularly, overheating of the air must be guarded against.

For the swimmer's own protection it is well to take a shower bath after leaving the pool.

73 per cent of the Kearney vote will elect Stephens.

Vardaman did not get that "50 or 60 thousand majority" in the first primary that was claimed.

The slogan in the first race of the Vardaman brigade was put him over in the first or he cannot win.

Ben Humphreys explodes the Vardaman claim about having done so much for flood control. There are many other things claimed for Vardaman that are just as easily exploded. Jeems has always been heavy on talk but ding poor on performance.

Overconfidence of the Stephens supporters and the respect shown to Miss Belle Kearney in not organizing Stephens Clubs over the State is largely responsible for the fact that Stephens did not lead Vardaman. The second race will be fought to the finish with not over 130,000 votes polled, and it behooves Stephens forces to be up and doing and if they do he will roll up a majority of not less than ten thousand votes. Don't rest on your ears.—Ruleville Record.

VARDAMAN HAS NEVER SPOKEN TO THIS LADY SINCE.

Well authenticated reports emanating from Jackson state that Mr. Vardaman has never spoken to Miss Etta Mitchell since John Sharp Williams had her placed on the National Democratic Committee.

Miss Mitchell is a very brilliant woman and a lovely character, and during the life time of her father, when he was in charge of the State Insane Hospital, he was more than kind to Mr. Vardaman. And it is stated that this lady has never knowingly given the ex-Senator offense. But his vanity could not bear the idea of her accepting a place to which she was recommended by John Sharp Williams. Jeems always wants to be the whole show even if its a side show.

BOTH THE LOCKJAW AT THE SAME TIME.

It is a singular coincidence that Vardaman and Lee Russell both took the political lockjaw at the same time. One from what is usually stated physical, and from what thousands believe to be mental, too, defects, and the other from Birkheaditis.

The Vardaman campaign committee found itself, if reports be true, where it felt that it was damned if it did and damned if it didn't use Bilbo, but it knew that the Mississippi public was too sick at the stomach of Russell to countenance placing him on the stump.

Bilbo is an emetic but Russell is rank poison to every sense of decency in the state. Yet Vardaman has stated since the Birkhead suit that Russell is O. K. The apparent sympathy between the two men shows that they are political Siamense twins.

LADIES, DON'T FORGET THE INSANE HOSPITAL SCANDAL.

Ladies, if here should be one of you thinking of voting for Vardaman, let your mind run back to the Insane Hospital Scandal during Bilbo's administration when that institution for the care of the State's afflicted and unfortunate was a house for harlots and where the very campus was used, with the connivance of high state officials, by numbers at the same time for lecherous purposes. Then revert, please, to the Birkhead affair—these are just a few of the outstanding disgraces that have come to the State because of men elected to office with Vardaman's aid. And they are backing Vardaman now. Let's not prate about wanting "clean men in office" and then by our ballots aid men to get office who have either participated in these debaucheries or who have helped them to get out of the meshes of the law when they have been caught.

We can furnish you the testimony taken by the Legislative Investigating Committee, if you want it. It wont bear printing in a newspaper.

A FEW THINGS SHOWN BY RETURNS OF FIRST PRIMARY

That in one of the counties, there were several hundred people to vote who had not paid taxes.

That sheriffs in some counties had back-dated tax receipts

That hundreds voted who had moved from one place to the other and who had not been in the precincts but a few months.

That in certain localities those known to have voted for Harding or Debs were allowed to vote without question.

That Lester, outspoken Socialist and once candidate for governor of Mississippi, voted, and his wife also, and they both voted for Vardaman.

Yet there are some people who seem to think that those who follow the law and primary regulations should make no protest about having their ballots nullified by illegal votes.

The law and the regulations should be followed strictly and when that is done, no Democrat who loves his State can object.

There ought to be some way found to handle situations where the law and primary regulations are openly and notoriously disregarded.

THE WOMEN OF MISSISSIPPI.

News reports today from Mississippi are that it lies with the supporters of Miss Belle Kearney to determine whether Mr. Stephens or Mr. Vardaman will go to the Senate to succeed John Sharp Williams. If the women of Mississippi, from whom it is assumed Miss Kearney got her 17,000 votes, really represent what they should in that state, Mr. Stephens will be the next Senator.

It is almost inconceivable that Mississippi women progressive and earnest enough to forsake their traditions and take an active part in politics will blight the state and the nation by returning James K. Vardaman. He represents everything that is distasteful in national life. A blatant demagogue of the coarsest stripe, labeled as "utterly untrustworthy" by the leader of his party, and constantly engaged in destructive movements, he sponsors everything that women came into politics to abolish. His crafty intelligence will undoubtedly lead him to stress "the nigger issue" in such a way as to attract unthinking women, but in Mississippi there is nothing to prevent Mr. Stephens from counting.

The women of America look to the women of Mississippi to defeat Mr. Vardaman in the primary run-off in September. This is the most important and useful task women have had the opportunity to perform since, in 1920, they had their chance to put the United States in the League of Nations.—Louisville (Ky.) Times

HIGH POINTS IN ADDRESS OF GRENADA COUNTY STEPHENS CLUB.

State Owes The Two Candidates Nothing.
Would you hire one lawyer to work with another who had abased and vilified the other?

In picking one horse to work with another, would you select one that was noted for kicking out of the traces?

Vardaman said, "Probably Old Lady Roosevelt was frightened by a dog * * but I am disposed to apologize to the dog for mentioning it."

When his personal, political organ said, "We had no just cause to make war on Spain in 1898," was he seeking to arouse Spain to fight us again while we were at War with Germany?

What an estimate this Vardaman satellite (Russell) places upon the morals of the men and the women of Mississippi when he asserts that a suit filed against him for consorting with crooked women makes sure of higher political honors in Mississippi.

Ghosts of the dead and dying at sea do not haunt Hubert Stephens at night time.

Stephens endorses Wilson in taking labor's chief, (Samuel Gompers) to Paris; Vardaman condemns Wilson's every act at Paris.

Stephens young, hale and hearty; question mark behind Vardaman's mental and physical condition.

Asks for ballots to be cast without prejudice or fear.

Well authenticated rumors are current in Mississippi that some from the "inner circle" of the Vardaman camp say that they have $14,000.00 to spend to elect Vardaman in the Second primary. That much money can not be honestly used. Mississippi wants no Newberry business in this State.

GRENADA COUNTY BOY WRITES OF C. M. T. C.

Ft. Barrancas, Fla., Aug. 19, 1922.
Grenada Sentinel,
Grenada, Miss.

Dear Editor and Readers:

Provided you will give me a bit of your time and space, I will try to give you a brief explanation of our Citizens Military Training Camps now being held at Camp McClelland, Anniston, Ala., and Ft. Barrancas, Pensacola, Fla.

Being in the Coast Artillery, and stationed ere at Ft. Barrancas, naturally gives me reasons to know more of Pensacola and its surroundings than the other camp.

Being practically a new organization, no doubt will cause the greater majority of you to ask immediately what is a C. M. T. C., and what is it for? First of all it is a fine trip and a month's military training for wide-awake, able-bodied boys and young men, all at the government's expense. Second to bring together young men of all types, both native and foreign born, to develop closer national and social unity, to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship, to show the public by actual example that camp instruction of this kind is desired by red-blooded boys, that it will develop them physically, mentally and morally, and will teach Americanism in its true sense.

Now you will wonder if we can really get much military information in just one month, well, just take it from me, we sure do, and we really do get to go to the range and try for marksmanship medals, and fire the big 10 and 12-inch coast defense guns, the same as the regular service men do after several months' training.

There are 300 men here and as clean a bunch as can be found anywhere in that number.

On our arrival we were furnished new uniforms and equipment, no second-hand or old goods. We get wholesome, perfectly balanced food at all times.

Clean recreation and good athletics, including base ball, tennis, boxing and real salt water bathing are all directed by our efficient Chaplain, 1st Lieut. M. W. Reynolds.

And boys just listen! A few days ago automobiles were sent out by the big citizens of Pensacola and carried us all sight seeing and joy riding, and cars were not all that came—girls in abundance, and ice cream galore.

Now, of course, we have to give the greatest part of our time to the training, but there are always plenty of places to go and lots to be seen, while not on duty.

Next year our camps will be large enough to accommodate three times the number that are now here, so why not get in touch with the proper authorities, right now, and be one of the lucky ones that get the trip next year? Information may be had by addressing Commanding General 4th Corps Area, Ft. McPherson, Ga.

Only have a few more days here, then I will go back to old Grenada once more.

Thanking you for your valuable space, Mr. Editor, and hoping to see you all in the near future, I am,

Your friend,
Powell P. Bernhardt,
3rd Co., C. M. T. C.
Ft. Barrancas, Fla.

Grasshoppers May Attack Corn After Grass is Cut. Farmers Should Guard Against Any Damage.

A. & M. College, Miss.—As hundreds of farmers over Mississippi are now taking advantage of the splendid weather for making hay R. W. Harned, State Entomologist, urges them to be on the lookout for grasshoppers and guard against any damage to corn or other crops on fields near meadows that are being mowed. If the hoppers are numerous in meadows, they are certain to attack nearby crops as soon as the grass is cut. This has been especially true of corn near Starkville and other points, parts of fields being almost ruined by grasshoppers when adjacent meadows were mowed.

To prevent this damage, when the grasshoppers are numerous poisoned bait should be broadcast along the edges of the fields next to the meadows immediately after the grass is cut. A poisoned bran mash that has proven very successful in Mississippi this year is made by mixing 1 pound Paris green or white arsenic with 24 pounds of bran. Two quarts of cheap molasses is dissolved in 2 gallons of water; half a dozen oranges or lemons are squeezed into the water and the pulp and peeling chopped up fine and added. The poisoned bran and the molasses solution should then be mixed, stirring constantly to get it thoroughly dampened. This amount of bait will treat three acres. It should be applied after sundown, as it soon dries out and fails to attract grasshoppers if put out during the day.

NEW CHICKEN PEST IN MISSISSIPPI

Mississippians Are Urged To Look For Destructive Fowl Tick, or So-Called "Blue Bug."

A. & M. College, Miss.—The first appearance in Mississippi of the Chicken Tick, Fowl Tick, or so-called "Blue Bug" of Western Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, California, and Florida was recorded recently in Harrison County when Inspector Bynum, of the State Plant Board, found this pest on chickens in Biloxi. This tick is much more serious than ordinary lice and mites as it often kills chickens in a few days and is much harder to destroy than common poultry pests. It has been known to live without food for over two years and is very resistant to the usual insecticidal sprays and poisons.

People in South Mississippi especially are urged to carefully examine their poultry and poultry houses for ticks and to send any specimens they may find to the Entomologist, A. & M. College, Miss., for determination. The young or seed ticks will be found on the chickens, but the older ticks feed only at night and most of them will be found in cracks in the poultry houses. It is hoped that this pest occurs in only a few places and can soon be exterminated as it has never before been reported from Mississippi, Louisiana, or Alabama, and will cause much expense and loss to poultrymen if it should become widespread in these states.

MANY MISSISSIPPI TOWNS TO FIGHT ANTS

Mississippi Plant Board Flooded With Requests For Campaigns From All Parts of the State.

A. & M. College, Miss.—Every mail is bringing to the State Plant Board office requests from new towns in all parts of the State for we estimate on conducting Argentine Ant control campaigns this fall. Mr. R. Smith, Ant Specialist, is hurrying from town to town, mapping out the ant infestations and submitting to the mayors estimates on the cost of fighting the ants. Calls for help have been received from Hazelhurst, Aberdeen, Greenwood, Kosciusko, Terry, Durant, Crystal Springs, Summit, Woodville, Gulfport, Mississippi City, Biloxi, Laurel, Meridian, Bay St. Louis, Yazoo City, Clarksdale, Magnolia, and Hattiesburg. It is hoped that control campaigns will be made in all those towns this fall.

New towns in Mississippi are constantly being added to the infested list which now numbers 56 towns as follows: Aberdeen, Ackerman, Amory, Bay St. Louis, Benton, Biloxi, Booneville, Brookhaven, Canton, Chatawa, Adams, Callman, Greenville, Gulfport, Hamburg, Hattiesburg, Hazelhurst, Houston, Jackson, Johnston, Kosciusko, Laurel, Landon, Magnolia, McComb, Meridian, Mississippi City, Norfield, Ocean Springs, Osyka, Oxford, Pass Christian, Pascagoula, Pelehatchie, Pearllington, Reigeland, Rodney, Shaw, Starkville, Summit, Terry, Tillatobia, Tylertown, Vicksburg, Wasson, West, West Point, Woodville and Yazoo City.

Besides those named above, the Argentine Ant may occur in many other towns in Mississippi, and the Plant Board will be glad to receive and determine specimens of ants from any town where they are becoming troublesome. Address all specimens to the Entomologist, State Plant Board, A. & M. College, Miss.

WILL EXHIBIT PLANT MARAUDERS AT FAIRS

Notorious Insect Pests And Plant Diseases Draw Public Attention.

A. & M. College, Miss.—Farmers, who are robbed of more than $2,000,000,000 annually by the ravages of insect pests and plant diseases in the United States, ought to know their robbers, learn to fight them, and be on the lookout for new outlaws, is the opinion of the State Plant Board of Mississippi, which is preparing a number of exhibits of these marauders of the plant kingdom to be shown at all the fairs in the State. These exhibits consist of hundreds of destructive insect pests and plant diseases, including the pink bollworm of cotton, European corn borer, and various other notorious pests the Plant Board is trying to other pests that have already entered the State but are being eradicated and their further introduction prevented, are also shown. An interesting feature is a complete boll weevil poisoning display prepared by the U. S. Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine at Tallulah, La.

shown last fall at 28 fairs in Mississippi, and attracted considerable attention, visitors asking innumerable questions and requesting thousands of bulletins on the subjects displayed. It is hoped that all people visiting county and state fairs in Mississippi this summer and fall will spend some time studying the Plant Board exhibits and various crop pests against which the Plant Board is waging war. Any fair association that has not yet made arrangements for one of these exhibits should write at once to the State Plant Board as the number is limited and schedules are already being prepared.

The new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord

A Real Cord Tire for Small Cars at a Popular Price

The new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord in the 30 x 3 $\frac{3}{4}$  inch clincher type is a tire that the small car owner will warmly welcome.

It gives him, at a price lower than the net price he is asked to pay for many "long discount" tires, every advantage of quality cord tire performance, for it is a quality tire through and through.

It is made of high-grade long-staple cotton; it embodies the reliable Goodyear quality of materials; its clean-cut tread engages the road like a cogwheel.

The scientific distribution of rubber in this tread—the wide center rib and the semi-flat contour—gives a thick, broad surface that is exceedingly slow to wear.

The tough tread stock in this tire is carried down the sidewalls clear to the bead, making it rut-proof to an extraordinary degree.

In every particular it is a representative Goodyear product, built to safeguard the world-wide Goodyear reputation.

Despite its high quality, and the expertness of its construction, it sells at a price as low or lower than that of tires which lack its important features.

You can get this new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord now, as well as the famous All-Weather Tread Cord, from any of the Goodyear Service Station Dealers listed here.

TANK TO EXPLODE Mr. L. G. Johnson of Merigold, Narrowly Escapes Death From The Explosion.

The explosion of the gasoline tank of a Ford car near Schoona bridge on Sunday night about 9 o'clock, came near causing the death of Mr. L. G. Johnson, of Merigold. His left arm was badly burned and left shoulder knocked out of place.

It seems that Johnson was driving a truck. He stated to a Sentinel representative that he was returning from Aberdeen. He met the Ford car at or near Schoona bridge. The Ford was owned by Elbert Thomas, a lad about 15 years of age whose home is Calhoun City. Johnson being without gasoline, had the consent of young Thomas to get some out of his car. He took a lamp and got under the Ford with the purpose of drawing the gasoline when he said that the top of the lamp dropped off which caused the gasoline tank of the Ford to explode and in his attempt to get out, he knocked his shoulder out of joint. He had much trouble in stopping his clothing from burning. His arm was burned to blisters and so was his left hand. The Ford car was entirely burned up.

Johnson was picked up by an autoist coming into Grenada and carried to the office of Dr. J. Sidney Sharp, where medical attention was given him, and Monday morning he was doing well and stated that he expected to go home in his truck that day, however, some one else was going to drive it.

The young Thomas, who owned the Ford, was accompanied by Elmore Baldwin, Allen Harris and Finley Goings.

FINALLY WENT CRAZY ABOUT HIM

Here's a story, published in The Fourth Estate, which shows how the people of a Kansas community appreciate their editor. Read it:

"In appreciation of the work of a Kansas editor in behalf of their community, a bunch of citizens recently presented him with a bouquet. On the same occasion a quartet from a local church sang a few sweet songs and a minister made a little talk. After the talk six husky men carried the popular editor from the house and placed him tenderly in a model 1921 plumed sedan, and the whole town formed in a parade behind the editor's expensive car. After the parade the appreciative crowd returned to their homes serene in the thought of having provided one bright day in the life of their local news purveyor, even if they did wait until he was dead to do it."—Greenwood Daily Commonwealth.

"ARE GOOD ROADS WORTH THEIR COST."

Prize-Winning Essay by Grenada High School Girl on This Subject. Miss Catherine Lufkin Awarded Gold Medal by Interstate Trust & Banking Co., of New Orleans.

For fifteen consecutive years, the Interstate Trust & Banking Co., of New Orleans, La., has given gold medals to the winners in a contest for the best essay on some carefully selected subject of general public interest. These competitions have been open to the graduating classes in colleges and high schools throughout Louisiana and Mississippi. This year, prizes were awarded in 155 educational institutions, the subject being "Are Good Roads Worth Their Cost." The essay judged to be the best among those submitted by pupils in the graduating class of Grenada High School was written by Miss Catherine Lufkin and The Sentinel is publishing below the essay in full, believing that its publication will serve to still further arouse interest in a subject so vital to the welfare and prosperity of the South:

A great senator, Charles Sumner, once said, "The two great forces for the advancement of civilization are the school-master and good roads." Roads, like the veins and arteries in the human body, carry the streams of life from one community to another. Mighty nations of olden times realized the importance of good roads, which like a great network stretched from coast to coast and connected all points of the realm no matter how remote and indeed, many of these splendid roads are still in use today.

Men have long realized to a greater or less extent, the importance of good roads, but the question of expense has been a difficult one to solve. Who shall pay for the roads that so many people have to use. The good roads are paid for in various ways. Individual states are constructing highways, the government is aiding committees in the construction of roads, in various towns bonds are floated and often private companies aid in the good road movement.

There are about four grades of roads in the main and it is with their cost and upkeep that we are principally concerned.

First, the graded dirt road, the cheapest kind and the worst in bad weather. This road costs from $1,000 to $1,500, a mile and at least $100 per year to keep it in passable condition.

Second, the drained, graded, gravel road which costs from $10,000 to $12,000 a mile. An example of this road is the Jeff Davis Highway which costs, in this county, about $11,000 a mile, of which $2,000 is spent for concrete bridges and $3,000 for grading and engineering expenses. The cost of a gravel road can be greatly decreased if there are natural deposits of gravel nearby. The yearly cost of upkeep is $150 and the roads wear out in about two years if not properly cared for. A brick road on a concrete base costs $20,000 per mile and is decidedly the best road for this section of the country.

The third and most durable and most expensive is the concrete road. In the end this road is the cheapest if the community is able to afford it. To a rich and flourishing community it will prove decidedly the best investment as it does not require much overhauling after being once put down. This road costs per mile from $25,000 to $30,000.

In the future we shall take better care of our roads after they have been built. France has the best roads in the world because she has learned how to take care of them. We are learning that a road is no better than its steepest hills and worst mudholes, for these determine the size of loads and the ease of travel.

The various benefits of good roads may be grouped under two main subdivisions, dealing respectively with economic and social benefits. So intimately are the public highways connected with every aspect of community life, that almost any method devised to measure the benefits of good roads is incomplete.

It is apparent, however, to anyone who has studied road matters for a period of years, that the advantages of improved public roads have been repeatedly proved beyond all argument. There is no case on record where any community has ever regretted the improvement of its roads. When the various ways in which good roads benefit a community are examined, a complex situation is found in which many actions and reactions take place. When good roads reduce the cost of hauling, adjacent lands become more valuable, there is a corresponding tendency of population to increase, and, in its turn, this tendency strengthens the demand for more good roads; social conditions improve; and the life of the community is influenced in numerous ways.

There are certain direct economic or money advantages which follow the improvement of public roads in every community. These advantages are probably most apparent in the reduced cost of hauling. Certain dependent economic advantages also arise in a community where roads have been improved.

The increase in the value of farm lands is an example of the indirect economic advantage of improved road conditions. It should not be considered, however, that, in presenting the advantages of improved roads, the direct decrease in the cost of hauling and the increase in farm values are entirely separate and independent. The farm increases in value partly because the cost of hauling is decreased.

Whatever methods are used to improve a road, the improvement for hauling purposes is due to three causes—the betterment of the road surface, the reduction of the grade, and the shortening of the length. On such an improved road the time required to haul a given quantity of material a given distance is reduced. It is important to recognize that for transportation purposes reduction of time is equivalent to a decrease of the distance from the market centers.

The cost of hauling farm produce to market is probably not so much increased by the presence of excessive grades as it is by the bad conditions of road surface. The desirable road surface is hard and reasonably smooth.

There is no question that poor road surfaces cause an economic waste, of which the total in this country is startling. The annual "mud tax" in the United States is $250,000,000, and in the end the "mud tax" is paid largely by the dwellers in towns and cities.

The argument for the reduced cost of hauling on country roads need not be carried further. In this connection it is well to remember that the economic problem today is not so much a problem of production as it is a problem of distribution.

It is also reasonable to say that good roads mean that diversified farming will be encouraged, the area of profitable production increased, the opportunity for favorable marketing improved, and more uniform distribution of farm products secured, and, as a consequence, speculation in staple products will be reduced.

It is a matter of common observation that, when any community has passed from a condition dominated by bad roads to a condition which is characterized by good roads, land values in that community advance. Here are a few instances of actual conditions which have been observed in various parts of the country:

In Lee County, Virginia, a farmer owned one hundred acres between Ben Hur and Jonesville, which he offered to sell for $1,800. In 1908 this road was improved and the farmer has since refused $3,000 for his farm.

In Jackson County, Alabama, the people voted a bond issue of $250,000 for road improvements, and improved 24% of the roads. The census of 1900 gives the value of all farm lands in Jackson County as $4.90 per acre. The census of 1910 places the value of all farm lands in the same county at $9.79 per acre.

The roads of this country are being used each year to a larger extent by the automobile. Each year it is estimated that no less than 3,000,000 tourists visit Switzerland, and a large number of these are Americans. As Switzerland depends upon the expenditures of tourists for a large amount of its revenue it is found profitable to build and maintain improved roads of the highest type to hold this business. There are in this country types of scenery and points of interest which compare most favorably with those of Europe, and of late years improved roads have been constructed in the vicinity of some of these places.

When, therefore, one considers all the various ways in which tourist travel benefits those communities which are reached by the country roads, it is obvious that, in reckoning the benefits of improved roads, the possibility of increased tourist travel must be included as an economic factor.

The question of better rural schools is today an important one in the public mind. The rural population is apparently more willing at present to support better schools than at any previous time. The place of the one-room school is being taken by larger consolidated schools throughout those portions of the country where conditions make it practicable to convey children to school at public expense. Bad road conditions inflict two-fold hardships on the one-room district school. In the first place where it is situated on a poor road, it is a common practice in severe weather to keep the children at home. The frequent small attendance is thus, at times, almost depleted, and the continuity and value of school work are much impaired. Often the poor roads prevent small, weak schools from becoming consolidated into large, strong graded schools.

It should be pointed out that there is a marked tendency for the consolidated school to become the social and intellectual center of the community. With this fact becoming more and more recognized, the importance of the consolidated school as a community center is increasing. In order that the people may receive the full benefit of their school, the building must be readily accessible throughout the year.

The beneficial efforts of the rural free delivery service upon the happiness and home comforts of our rural population have become established facts, and nothing contributes so much to its efficiency and regularity as good roads.

The esthetic value of roads well built and clean is sometimes reluctantly conceded or even denied by individuals. It is noticeable, however, that along improved roads there is a visible tendency for farmers to improve the appearance of their homes and their out-buildings. In fact, the presence of good roads seems, many times, to stimulate latent self-respect into practical expression.

Social activities in rural communities need all the encouragement and stimulus that can reasonably be given. The necessary subdivision of the church into numerous small buildings has necessarily operated to weaken the attendance, but the concentration of church funds and church attendance is dependent upon improved road conditions.

The drift of the country population to the city is certainly to be deplored, and a way to explain this drift is often sought. It is not clearly established that GOOD ROADS alone can turn the tide of city-ward movement but they are shown to be effective causes in DEPLETING country population.

Good Roads have become today not a luxury but a necessity and The Good Road Movement that is now being pushed in many states, aims to bring before the public the advantages of well constructed highways, not only from an industrial and purely business point of view, but also from their effects on the general welfare of communities.

STEPHENS CLUB FORMED. ADDRESS COVERING IS. SUES OF CAMPAIGN

March 29, 1917, in which among many other sympathetic German statements, we find this plea for Germany: "We have no just cause to make war on Germany and our President knows it." Not satisfied with damning the policy of his own country at that particular hour, he harked back to the war with Spain in that same editorial and used these words: "We had no just cause to make war on Spain in 1898." In the latter statement can it be supposed that he was seeking to arouse Spain to fight us again while we were at grips with Germany?

What is thought of the bird which befools its own nest?

What father, regardless of the circumstances, would accuse his own son of "stabbing" another man "in the back" while the two were in a death struggle armed with the deadliest of deadly weapons?

Mr. Vardaman said, after the United States had been compelled to meet German submarine warfare with bullets, "The United States is stabbing Germany in the back while England and France have her down." Do you believe that what he said was true? No, you do not. And the men and women who do believe it, should take their goods and chattels and forever leave American soil.

Any man, regardless of who he is, is not suited to properly meet life's duties, who has not learned to bridle his own tongue. The Scripture as well as our own experience teaches this.

What Has Come to Mississippi as a Result of Vardamanism?

Without undertaking the herculean task of enumerating all the woes that have come to Mississippi because of the political standards Vardaman has set and because of the political pests that have been born of his heresies, the State of Mississippi was treated to the humiliating experience just the other day of having the man who happens to occupy the Governor's chair state to a newspaper reporter, just after service had been had on him in the Birkhead case filed at Oxford, that one other suit based upon lechery and adultery would elect him to any office without opposition. This suit, which according to Russell's own testimony, among many other things, shows that he took a woman which he knew to be dissolute into his own home. What a brazen statement for one to make. Think of it.

What an estimate this Vardaman satellite places upon the moral tone of the women of Mississippi, when he is so impervious to shame as to say that consorting with crooked women and adultery in high places make sure of higher political honors in Mississippi. Has Mississippi descended to that depth? No, a thousand times, no. In that same interview, he sold prated about his allegiance and loyalty to Vardaman.

Thoughts of the Birkhead case bring to mind once again the insane hospital scandal, the Goldsby pardon and numerous other things that have befooled the atmosphere in Mississippi, acts which are the results of men Vardaman endorsed for office. And bear in mind that he is still consorting with these same fellows, who hope that out of his election may come further plundering of the public for them.

Few will question that Mississippi has had her fair name fly-blown. Who did it? There can be but one answer.

Has Our Sympathy in His Affliction.

And now, it is sad to relate that the very man whose acts have made such things possible and whose wrath has seemed to know no limits, is a physical wreck, and many who are in a position to know say that he is also a mental wreck. In his affliction, he has the sympathy of all good men and all good women. The man or woman who would not wish the God of mercy to deal kindly with him, is wanting in those sublime attributes so necessary to properly meet life's duties. For him personally, we would approach the throne of Grace.

Hubert Stephens' Record Clean.

In the other candidate, Hubert Stephens, you have a REAL MAN. He is a Mississippian by birth. You have a man whose record as a private citizen and as a public official is unquestioned.

You have a man in Hubert Stephens who is vigorous and active. One with an admirable record as district attorney and one who was held in high esteem by his associates in Congress. One whom such men as Ben Humphreys and others of Mississippi thought big enough to succeed the immortal John Sharp Williams in the Senate.

During the ten years which Hubert Stephens was in Congress, he urged his ideas on his party associates, but when, after counseling together, a course of action was determined on, he was DEMOCRAT enough to bow to the will of the majority. Being a Democrat, he acted the part of a Democrat. He was not so puffed up as to think himself wiser than a majority of his party associates.

And better still, Hubert Stephens never by word or deed gave aid or comfort to the enemy of his country when at war.

Being straight himself, he sees straightness in others. Being honest himself, he sees honesty in others. No Cries of the Dead From Bottom of Sea.

The cries of mothers and little children and men as they echo from the bottom of the sea do not disturb Hubert Stephens in the night time because of any encouragement given German submarines by him.

Ghosts of the dead and the dying at sea as a result of the ruthless German submarine do not haunt Hubert Stephens. Would that all other Mississippians had made a record so that they would not haunt them.

Hubert Stephens has been true in all things. He has never been the advocate of the rich or powerful. He has never been the enemy of honestly accumulated property, still he has not failed to plead the cause of those unable to speak for themselves.

He came of the common people and has been true to them.

Stephens a True Friend to Labor.

He has recognized, as all other thinking people, that great capital is organized, hence as a true American he has recognized that it was not only right, but a duty that labor owes itself to organize. Every man is entitled to not only living wages, but he is entitled to lay by something for the comforts of life and for the benefit of himself and his family for old age, and in passing, it is proper here to state that no word ever passed the lips of Hubert Stephens denunciatory of labor or of the laboring man, and any statement to the contrary is the vilest political rot, and the circulation of any such rot, shows that those responsible for it are wanting in respect for those whom they hope to deceive.

God has ever blessed the laboring man. He is the salt of the earth, and fortunately for the general welfare of Mississippi most of us are laboring men of some kind.

Stephens Stands With Woodrow Wilson, Labor's Greatest Friend—Vardaman Against Wilson.

We are sure that labor has not forgotten the great consideration given them by Woodrow Wilson. We are sure that labor recognizes that it was Woodrow Wilson that put the 8 hour law on the books and that it was Woodrow Wilson—the man whom Vardaman cannot find words sufficiently vicious to express his condemnation of—that gave labor the place in the affairs of our country that it had long sought. But for the acts of Woodrow Wilson and McAdoo, labor would today occupy a most unhappy attitude in dealing with the greed of the profiteer.

Hubert Stephens endorses as a whole the acts of Woodrow Wilson and McAdoo; Vardaman denounces them. Can it be that any number of laboring men will take their position along side the man who pores out the vilest wrath on the administration that its leaders say was labor's benefactor?

Took Labor Chief to Paris.

It was Woodrow Wilson who took labor's chief to Paris to pass upon what most concerned labor in writing the Treaty after the war was over. Vardaman condemns Wilson's every act at Paris.

This, fellow Democrats, is a brief review of the records of the two men. This is a graphic sketch of them as they stand today in the eyes of the people of the United States.

One, should Mississippi be called upon to suffer the affliction of his again being sent to the Senate, would go there, if he should be able to go at all, discredited throughout the Nation and with the finger of suspicion pointing towards his Democracy.

The other one, should he be sent to the Senate, would receive the glad hand of his party associates. He would be generously welcomed. He would at once be placed where he could render the highest and best service to the people of Mississippi.

Republican Organization for Vardaman.

Sundry facts and circumstances go to show that the Republican organization in Mississippi is aiding in every way possible Vardaman's campaign. Possibly they are undertaking to repay Mr. Vardaman for his fulsome praise of Harding, and possibly, too, these Republicans are wanting to thank Mr. Vardaman for Harding's having named the Jackson negro lawyer, Perry Howard, to a $5,000.00 place in one of the departments at Washington.

Vardaman Campaign Committee Has Seemed To Have Lots of Money.

The Vardaman campaign committee has seemed to be spending lots of money. Some people are wondering how much of the campaign funds, if any, have come from Republican sources. Can it be that somebody is trying to Newfarrize Mississippi? Rumors are current that some of the "inner circle" from the Vardaman camp say that they have $14,000 for the Second Primary. Lots of money to be used in three weeks time.

Asks For Ballots Without Fear or Prejudice.

The casting of a ballot is a serious duty. Let it be hoped that every Democrat will cast his or her ballot without fear or prejudice. Remember that what we do today stands for time and eternity. God demands of each of us the best we know how to do. These are serious times. We need to think more about our duty to our God and to our country. Let us cast our ballots in the coming primary in the fear of God and with an eye single to the betterment of our common country and the welfare of our children.

We are Mississippians; we are Americans and our destinies are indissolubly linked together. We honestly believe that the election of Hubert Stephens is best for the women and children of our State.

May the result of the election bring more happiness and contentment to our people.

Respectfully,
Grenada County Stephens Club,
Dr. J. W. Young, President.
H. H. Heath, Secretary.

THE HOME ESTIMATE OF VARDAMAN.

It was stated in these columns, a few days ago that a candidate for public office is best known in the community where he has long resided; that by reason of long acquaintance his home folks are well qualified to pass judgment on his qualifications.

On this basis, James K. Vardaman has been weighed in the balance and found wanting.

As predicted by the Daily News, he did not carry the county in which he is a citizen, the city in which he resides, the ward where he votes, or even the block where he has his residence.

Mr. Vardaman lost Jackson by the overwhelming majority of three to one.

The best he could muster here, despite the fact that he has powerful and influential friends in the capital city, who worked unceasingly in his behalf, and resorted to all sorts of tricks and subterfuges to get votes, was 858, out of a total 2792 cast within the corporate limits.

So much for Jackson, where Mr. Vardaman has made his home since 1903—a period of nearly twenty years.

Now let's take a look at Leflore County, where Mr. Vardaman made his home for about twenty years before coming to Jackson.

Up in Leflore Mr. Vardaman likewise has some powerful and influential friends. He has a brother, a very popular man, who is the sheriff and tax collector. It is a community of splendid people, folks who overlook the ordinary faults of their neighbors, and likewise magnify their virtues, but that was of no avail to the man whom his fanatical supporters term "The People's Choice."

Mr. Vardaman's showing in Leflore was even poorer than in Jackson. The vote in that County stood: Stephens, 1,015; Vardaman, 395; Kearney, 135.

Vardaman failed to carry Leflore County; he failed to carry the city of Greenwood; he failed to carry the ward in which he formerly resided. All were overwhelmingly against him.

If this don't give you a little food for thought, then you are incapable of thinking.—Jackson Daily News, August 20.

THREE HURT IN AUTO. MOBILE ACCIDENT SUNDAY.

Three persons were hurt, none of them seriously, Sunday afternoon when a Studebaker automobile owned and driven by Mr. Walter Witherington, bridge foreman for the Illinois Central with present headquarters at Holcomb, ran head foremost into a deep culvert. The accident occurred about 6 miles west of Grenada just the other side of the farm of Rhodes Bros., on the Holcomb road. Mr. Witherington, his wife and little seven-year old daughter, Maude Rivers, and Mrs. James Gordon were on their way to Holcomb from Grenada about four o'clock in the afternoon. Where the accident occurred, the main bridge has been out several months and a temporary bridge was being used to the left of the old bridge. The road here takes a sharp turn to the left. Mr. Witherington saw that he was not going to be able to make the turn, so he cut off his power and applied his brakes so that the car would go into the ditch as gently as possible. The little girl, who was on the front seat, was cut severely by about the face by glass from the windshield which was broken and the two ladies on the rear seat were bruised about the head. Mr. Witherington was not hurt at all. None of the injuries were serious. The only damage to the car was the broken windshield. Had the machine been going at a high rate of speed, all the occupants would no doubt have been badly hurt.

BLACK-PERRY.

A wedding of much interest to their many friends was solemnized at the home of Mrs. J. E. Perry, Memphis, on Wednesday of last week, when Miss Rosebud Perry became the bride of Mr. William Alston Black. The ring ceremony was said by Rev. Carpenter of the Evergreen Presbyterian church, Memphis.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Elaine sang, "The Hour That Gave Me You." Nuptial music was well rendered by Mrs. Suddoth.

The bride wore a dress of blue canton crepe with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses and valley lilies.

The bride is the attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Perry, of Graysport, Miss., and for the last four years she has made her home in Memphis.

The groom is in the mercantile business at Parkin, Ark.

After August 28, they will be at home in Parkin, Ark. XX.

"SOMEBODY HAS LIED."

Congressman B. G. Humphreys Wires That Vrdaman Campaign Committee Credited Him With Words He Did Not Say.

New Albany, Miss., Aug. 14.—Hon. Hubert D. Stephens, candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator, today wired The Commercial Appeal the contents of a telegram he received from Congressman Humphreys, of Greenville. Mr. Stephens wired as follows:

"New Albany, Miss., Aug. 14, 1922. "The Commercial Appeal: Regarding statement in today's paper, page seven, containing letter from Congressman B. G. Humphreys, Mr. Humphreys wires 'of course I have written no such letter as you mention in your telegram. Am telegraphing every county denying letter and saying I am opposed to Vardaman and have voted for you. I also stated that Vardaman's claim for credit for passage of flood control bill was ridiculously exaggerated. Hope and believe you will win. (Signed) B. G. Humphreys."

POPLARVILLE FREE PRESS "TO WOMEN VOTERS"

Pearl River County Newspaper Says Vardaman and His Proxies Think That Every Person Who Voted for Miss Kearney Committed "The Unpardonable Sin." Says "Stephens and Kearney Voters Have Fought The Battle Together Thus Far and Have Won One Splendid Victory"

"The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." Never was the truth of this adage more clearly shown than in the present situation in Mississippi politics, for the eighteen thousand women who supported Miss Kearney on Tuesday have in their hands the fateful question as to who shall succeed the peerless John Sharp Williams in the Senate. If James K. Vardaman is elected, it will be the ballots of the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of the boys who fought in France that will put him in. If Hubert D. Stephens is our next senator, and we confidently believe that he will be, it will be the patriotic support of the noble Christian women of our commonwealth to which he will owe his success.

It is therefore highly important that every woman in this county should realize her individual responsibility and steadfastly determine to do her highest duty. It is for this reason that we venture to state once more the fundamental issue raised by this political contest. Miss Kearney—the woman's candidate, conducted a campaign so high-toned, so lofty in its appeal, and so devoid of personalities that the men would do well to emulate her splendid example. The large vote received by this first woman candidate points unmistakably to the election of some of our noblest women to high office within a very few years.

The Vardaman forces have always considered Miss Kearney as an "anti," and have taken the position that a vote cast for her was a vote against Vardaman. In this conclusion they could hardly be otherwise than correct, for it is well nigh inconceivable that a person who endorsed Miss Kearney and her platform could sympathize with anything which Mr. Vardaman stands for. With her it has always been "the high appeal," with him and his proxies always "the low appeal." In her speeches she sought always to reach the reason; Mr. Vardaman and his friends have sought constantly to appeal to passion and to prejudice. There is then absolutely nothing in common between Miss Kearney and Mr. Vardaman.

On the other hand Mr. Stephens represents an admirable second choice for Miss Kearney's supporters who have been condemned already to the ranks of the "antis" by the Vardaman following. Mr. Stephens is a high-toned gentleman, whose patriotism is unquestioned, whose Americanism is undiluted, whose record is unimpaired. If it be charged that his record failed to show a large amount of legislation enacted under his name, we respectfully refer you to Pat Harrison's record as a congressman for comparison with his wonderful achievements and unparalleled rise to prominence as a senator. Mr. Stephens has "the makings" for a splendid senator, and we predict that like Senator Harrison, he will speedily make a name for himself in the Senate. Mr. Vardaman was given six years of opportunity, aided by the presence of a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress, but he failed signally, and was repudiated by the national Democratic administration and by the sovereign votes of Mississippi.

In the eyes of Mr. Vardaman and his proxies, every person who voted for Miss Kearney committed "the unpardonable sin." They repeatedly stated that Mr. Vardaman would have to be elected in the first primary or not at all. With a second primary necessary, these men will resort to every artifice to lure you into their camp. They will make protestations of undying admiration for Miss Kearney, advance false arguments to induce your support, deal in glittering generalities to deceive the unwary, and resort to every specious plea in order to win.

The Stephens and Kearney supporters have fought the battle together thus far and have won one splendid victory. The same battle rages today as before the election last Tuesday. The issue is the same. The sole difference is that now the Stephens and Kearney supporters have one flag and one leader instead of two. Remember that any attempts to beguile you into Vardaman's camp is the last desperate effort of the wolf in sheep's clothing.—Poplarville Free Press.
